Study Guide for Bible Reading

Psalm 78

- What does the author say he will tell them? Where did he say he learned these things? Why is this significant for the study of history in the Old Testament?
- What specifically does he promise to tell them? How is that related to God? What does this tell us about the nature of Old Testament history? Why is that important?
- What does the author (and God) desire the next generations to do with this knowledge? What should we learn from this?
- How does the author describe the history and behavior of his forefathers? What does this tell us about Old Testament history?
- What specifically does the author say God did in the remainder of this Psalm? What specifically does the author say God's people did in the remainder of this Psalm? Do these two summaries seem to fit together or do they seem like they somehow aren't appropriate to the other? Why do you think this?
- What main point do you think the author was making by telling all this history? What should we learn from this?
- How does this Psalm end? What person does it focus on? Why do you think this is significant for the overall Old Testament history and beyond? What difference does this make?

Psalm 105

- What does the author command the people to do? Why?
- What are the people supposed to remember? What does this tell us about God and His relationship with His people?
- What examples of this does the author give in the rest of this Psalm?
- How do these examples from history give hope and motivation to God's people who read this Psalm? How does this apply?
